Fight Goes Forward Against
Diphtheria, Smallpox
Scourges
Smallpox and diphtheria were formerly scourges of childhood. Today they can be prevented by safe and simple means of immunization. It is a civic sin for any community to allow these dread diseases to destroy child life.
Smallpox was the first communicable disease to be brought under control by immunization. Edward Jenner in rural England in 1798 proved smallpox could be prevented by vaccination. Since his time vaccination against smallpox has been used on millions of persons of all ages in all parts of the world. Smallpox has been wiped out in those places where carefully prepared vaccine has been used with approved methods of vaccination and revaccination.
Great improvements in the preparation of vaccine have taken place since Jenner's day. Every scientific precaution is now used to produce a safe, reliable vaccine which must have the approval of the United States Public Health Laboratories. Its manufacture and distribution are carefully checked.
In vaccination today it is not necessary to mutilate the child with multiple scratches or rubbed-off skin. A simple method has been devised which causes very little, if any, pain and leaves a small scar. Vaccination may be performed safely at any time, but the best age for the first vaccination appears to be between 3 and 6 months of age. If there is a good take at that time the protection against smallpox will last years. To be safe, children should be revaccinated at school entrance and again in the face of any epidemic of smallpox.
Diphtheria is being brought under control by immunization. We know the cause of diphtheria, how it is transmitted, how to treat it, and better still, how it can be prevented. With all this knowledge we should have very few children dying from diphtheria. In recent years both the number of cases and deaths from the disease have been reduced considerably where immunization has been carried out systematically on preschool children.
New born babies are largely immune to diphtheria, but this immunity gradually fades out until at the age of 9 months about one-third of the babies have no immunity left.
After 9 months of age, babies should be immunized with diphtheria, toxoid or alum-toxoid. Older children and those sensitive to toxoid should be immunized with toxin-antitoxin. Immunization against smallpox and diphtheria should be expected of your doctor as a routine procedure in the first year or two of life.
NEXT: Young children especially susceptible to tuberculosis.
Of the 4,231 families in Helena, Mont., only 27 have five or more children, according to a report by the WPA housing survey. Approximately 66 per cent or 2,795 families, have no children; 741 families have one child; 471 families have two children and 197 families have three or four children.
The practice of holding elections on more than one day was not uncommon in the early years of the United States.
In 13 states—Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Dakota, Texas and Vermont—the whole cost of general relief is borne by local governments.

To Watch, to Be Aware, is Not to Bait

The controversy about the Federal Bureau of Investigation is beginning to degenerate into mere name-calling. That obscures the important point. Drunk with fancy phrases, partisans on both sides are hiding the importance of the matter behind a blizzard of invective.
The FBI did a fine job and a national service in running down the kidnapers who swept over the country in a wave 10 years ago. They were effective and admirable.
Recently it has been charged that some of its heads have become public enemies and have been so intent on producing a flashy record that they have disregarded people's rights and, spurred by heady fumes of war, have set up the beginnings of a national secret police, European style.
The reply is that radicals are trying to blacken a splendid service for their own ends. That is irrelevant. It makes no difference who makes the charges—the only question is, are they true?
Lots of people have always been unhappy about the custom that began with Al Capone, of convicting criminals, presumably guilty of all kinds of crime on federal income tax charges after local prosecution has failed. Perhaps it was the only way, but it is not the ideal way.
Fritz Kuhn of the Bund may be a scoundrel and a public menace, but to jail him for stealing money from an organization which had not complained about the theft is less than an ideal way of disposing of him.
Ditto Earl Browder, Communist head, sentenced for passport fraud committed years before. Were these men sentenced for the crimes they were directly accused of, or for their political activities? The severity of the sentences suggests that the latter might have had something to do with it.
Everyone who knows Attorney General Robert Jackson knows that he is genuinely devoted to civil liberties. To hear him talk of the spy delirium of the last war is to realize how deeply he abhors anything smacking of persecution. But even under such a supervisor as Jackson, the people do well to keep one eye on any federal police force.
To prosecute men for tax violation is all right. To prosecute them for thievery or passport violation is all right.
But all who have committed similar offenses should be prosecuted, for the essence of justice is equal treatment for all. If income tax or other laws are kept in the ice-box and brought out only when somebody wants to curb some other activity, political or social, then their operation is not just.
To watch closely, to scrutinize, to criticize the methods of federal police forces is not "bait" anybody. It is part of that eternal vigilance that is the price of liberty.

In 13 states—Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Dakota, Texas and Vermont—the whole cost of general relief is borne by local governments.

Sponsored by Band

The Hope High School band is sponsoring the picture "Remember the Night" starring Fred MacMurray and Barbara Stanwyck at the Saenger theater Tuesday night, in an effort to raise funds to send the band to the state meeting at Hot Springs Friday and Saturday of this week.
Agreements between employers and workers in Sweden's paper, wood pulp, sawmill, textile and machine industries assured labor peace in 1940. The agreements covered small wage increases, as well as certain supplementary wages because of higher living costs.

God of our fathers, known of old—
Lord of our far-flung battle-line—
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
Far-called our navies melt away—
On dune and headland skiffs the fire—
So, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the Nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues that have not Thee in awe—
Such boastings as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the Law—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard—

All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding calls not Thee to guard
For frantic boast and foolish word,
Thy Mercy on Thy People, Lord!

The City of Hope and the S. W. Ben Telephone Co. have granted permission to those who are interested in beautifying their grounds to plant low growing flowers around the light and telephone poles, but request that no vines or climbing varieties be used. This permission came through the solicitation of the Rose club and the club suggests to those residing along the Broadway of America to plant red verbenas, just a small bed around each pole. At each season of the year, we have shrubs or flowers making bright patches of color against the back ground of lovely lawns or a setting of graceful trees, and we can think of nothing that will add more color and beauty to a drab light or telephone pole, (things that are necessary for our comfort and convenience) than a bed of bright blooming flowers; verbenas are suggested because it is plentiful and a great drought resister. Portulaca or just common blooming moss, a tireless bloomer, is another suggestion. Now is the time for us all to get busy and greet the eye of the tourist as he passes thru one of the most progressive little cities of the South.

Schoolboy Rowe Has Great Hopes

12 to 2 Victory Over Indians Has Detroit Encouraged

DETROIT, Mich. (AP)—Story of an up and down (and up again) pitching career in headlines:

"Detroit Club Banks on 'Schoolboy' Rowe"—1933.

"Rowe Bewildered By Grip of Fame After Winning 16 Straight"—1934.

"Greatest of All is Rowe"—1935.

"5 Runs By Athletics and Rowe Goes Home to El Dorado, Ark."—1937.

"Arm Okay, Rowe Assures"—1938.

"Rowe Goes Back to Beaumont"—also 1938.

"Rowe Believes He Can Come Back"—1939.

"Don't Go Shouting This Around, But—Schoolboy Looks Good"—1940.

"Inspiration" for this last headline was Rowe's 12-to-2 conquest of the Indians at Cleveland Sunday. It tells the story of how Detroit feels about the Arkansas giant.

His attempted comebacks from a "misery" that affected his once great arm have been numerous. Only a year ago Rowe was elated as good as ever when he shut out the same Indians in his first game. That optimism was premature and he finished the year with 10 wins and 12 defeats.

Whether or not Rowe comes back in a pitching way, there are plenty of admirers of his courage. He had to do more than cure an ailing arm to win his way back to the American League. The fall from top to bottom has turned to ashes the hopes and ambition of more than one athlete.

At the start of the 1940 training season Manager Del Baker gave no hint that he was considering Lyn in his plans and there were rumors Rowe would have to make good on the Fourth of July or be turned loose.

Rowe is supremely confident.

"Get me three runs and I'll win," he told his teammates before Sunday's game. The Tigers got 12 but three would have been enough.

"I thought I had pretty good stuff," Lyn said, "Last year when I shut out Cleveland I was lucky and didn't have much."

They used to say in Detroit: "As Rowe goes so go the Tigers." The record books appear to support this axiom, so plenty of Tiger fans have their fingers crossed, and are hoping.

SERIAL STORY

K. O. CAVALIER BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

COPYRIGHT, 1946, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Val sees little of Eddie on the return trip. The last night out, he finds her on the after deck, kissing her. They are in different leagues, he insists, and he has no business kidding himself.

CHAPTER XXIII

WHEN Val finally went to bed she knew what she was going to tell Rodney Blair if he asked her again to marry him. She found it quite a relief now that she had made up her mind. She wondered if Rodney would be there to meet them when they docked. She had a hunch he would.

Val was right. When they finally slipped alongside their dock and were made fast, she saw Rodney Blair waving up at her.

Rodney wasn't the only one there, however. Sam Golden was so excited he almost fell into the bay.

A half dozen sports writers were on hand and a battery of photographers made ready to shoot the works.

Once again she had changed into more feminine clothes, donning the same suit she had worn when she boarded the ship almost two weeks ago.

Eddie Cavalier was watching her when she ran down the gangplank and up the tall, mustached man at the gate. He saw her kiss him lightly and turned away. Turning, he bumped into Capt. Steve Hansen.

"Well, Steve, coming to the fight tomorrow night? Bring all the boys. Don't worry about tickets. They're on me."

He laughed somewhat nervously. Deliberately Hansen looked at Val walking off with Rodney Blair. Then he looked back at Eddie.

"We'll be there, all right, son. An' we're for you all the way. In every way, too," he said but the significance was lost on Eddie.

EDDIE CAVALIER was too busy trying to drive the memory of Val kissing the stranger out of his mind.

Sam Golden embraced him like a long-lost son. The cameramen were snapping pictures all over the place. But when they looked for Val Douglas she had disappeared.

Eddie swore at himself when he searched for her face at the boxing commissioner's office when they reported for the weighing-in ceremonies at noon the next day. She wasn't there. He wondered if she'd be at the fight.

He posed for the photographers shaking hands with Corky Briggs. Corky looked good. He looked bigger and stronger than when Eddie had last seen him. The photographers asked them to square off together for a shot and Eddie wished someone would ring the bell right then and let them get it over with.

Duffy and Pop didn't let him out of sight once that afternoon. They went back to their hotel. Pop told him to lie down and nap for a couple of hours. He lay on the bed for 10 minutes and got up. He was thirsty, he explained to Duffy.

Duffy pulled up a chair and sat down next to him. "Eddie," he said, "you're not fooling me. It's that girl. I know. Of all the times for a dame to put the clamp on you it had to be now!"

"Eddie... don't you see... you've GOT to get her out of your mind. Look, Eddie... I'm not tryin' to ruin your private life. But at a time like this... this is different. Anyway... anyway, she's strictly poison."

"Don't ever say that again, Duffy. Never. I love that girl."

A great weight seemed to fall on Duffy Kelso and crush him. There were tears in his eyes as he got to his feet. He crossed to the window and looked out. Duffy Kelso also had a love. He loved Eddie Cavalier as a father loved a son. And now Duffy felt like a father seeing that son hurt. If only it were a dream. But it was real. Brutally real.

POP GRIMES could never recall when it had been so quiet in Eddie Cavalier's dressing room before a fight. Absolutely no one was to be admitted. Duffy had notified the guard outside. No one. Not even reporters.

Pop gave Eddie's bandages a final inspection, wordlessly. The only sound in the room was the drip, drip of a faucet. Duffy took out a cigar. He couldn't smoke in the dressing room, so he chewed it viciously.

Pop didn't like things the way they were. It was a violin string stretched too tight. He was afraid. He wished the preliminary would be over so they could go to work. Outside he could hear the muffled roar of the crowd. Someone must have been belted a good one.

Then, after hours, it seemed, they knocked on the door. "Okay, Cavalier," a muffled voice said, and they went out into the night and down the crowded aisle. Eddie almost ran. A tremendous roar went up as he climbed through the ropes. Another, an instant later, heralded Corky Briggs. Corky came over and shook hands with Eddie in his corner.

Eddie looked down at the ring-side as he shuffled his feet in the rain, and suddenly froze. Val

Douglas in the second press row was looking at him, her lips slightly parted, as though she wanted to say something but couldn't. He turned away quickly and went to the middle of the ring for instructions.

Back in his corner he slipped out of the blue bathrobe with the large white "E. C." on the back. Duffy was intoning last-second instructions in his ear, but he didn't hear a word. And then the bell which mercifully forced all other thoughts out of Eddie Cavalier's mind.

EDDIE jabbed with his left experimentally. Briggs blocked it and got in close, hammering a hard right to Eddie's ribs. It hurt, and Eddie knew the 10 pounds Briggs had on him was going to mean a lot. He speared Corky with another left and danced away.

Briggs followed, worked him into a corner and landed to his body again. He hooked Eddie sharply with a left and then dug into his ribs with another thudding right.

"He's working downstairs," Duffy told him hoarsely between rounds. "Keep dancing away and sparing him with your left. Don't let him get in close. He's dynamite in there."

Eddie didn't have to be told that. Corky Briggs was tough. At the end of the third round Eddie's body was red. "Two more rounds like that and he'll have you broke in two," Duffy said savagely.

Pop sponged him off and rubbed his leg muscles. The bell again.

EDDIE walked right into Briggs and hooked him with a wicked left. He followed it up with two straight left jabs to the face. Eddie bobbed and threw a right, but he was a little too eager. He went off balance just a trifle, but enough for Briggs to step in.

Corky looped a right that landed high on Eddie's cheek. It staggered him and Briggs put him against the ropes with a short right to the heart.

Eddie's guard came down momentarily and Briggs flashed a left to his head. It caught Eddie just above the eye.

Eddie covered up and weathered the storm as the bell sounded, but there was a trickle of blood running down his face.

Pop worked on it furiously with colloidion and cotton swab.

Val Douglas could see the damage from where she sat. And it was with a sickening feeling that she realized that Corky Briggs had reopened Eddie's blackack wound.

The game was well-played, going as far as 11 innings before Hope put over the winning run.

the streets from curb to curb as they battered homes and business establishments.

The municipal airport hanger was torn down and extent of the damage to three planes in it has not been ascertained. Furey said.

The injured were Melvin Williams, about 32, mechanic, broken back, and Edwin Cochran, mechanic, fractured shoulder blade and foot injury. They were hurt when the roof of a building in which they were working caved in.

Weight of water on the roof was believed responsible for the collapse. The hail damage included stores, signs, greenhouse glasses and plants, automobile tops, windows, shrubbery and trees.

At municipal airport only the north wall of the hanger was left standing.

South of the city, terraces were broken and farmlands leveled. Hail drifted three feet high in some places.

The 12-minute storm starting at 5:28 p. m., covered an area about two miles square in the city, where the hail was most severe. The truck-growing area in the powdery region escaped.

In the city, large trees were felled by wind which accompanied the hail. Traffic was stalled by flooded storm sewers. The wind caused some damage to houses and roofs.

To Leave Allies

especially allied transports moving troops to Norway.

And if Germany hangs on to the south, leaving the allies stalemated, what then? The allies will have missed the boat, and probably for the last time.

Air power will have beaten sea power, and Italy may take her cue. She may strike in the Mediterranean, perhaps at Africa through Spain, perhaps at the Suez canal or the Balkans.

Russians Expected to Strike Again

Next, Russia, as partner or rival, may attack Rumania, and the allied Near Eastern army will swing into action, along with Turkey. Russia may even strike at Finland and Sweden, splitting up Scandinavia with Germany or contesting it with her.

If former Germany may launch her Blitzkrieg on France by way of Belgium and Holland, and Japan may seize the Dutch East Indies. Whereupon our vulnerable Philippines will become still more vulnerable, and this world will become the worst of all possible worlds.

Horrible, but who shall call it impossible? All too possible is that one more reverse for the allies—after which the dictator powers will begin a ruthless scramble, the end of which no man can foresee.

WE THE WOMEN

By RUTH MILLETT

She is a woman and she is seventy years old. But neither of those facts is keeping Mrs. J. Borden Harriman from fulfilling her job as American Minister to Norway according to the highest traditions of the diplomatic service.

No one would criticize the American minister to Norway if she decided that there was no more she could do in that country and stopped the highly dangerous business of following the Norwegian government in its flight from German bombs.

Strong able-bodied men in a similar position have run for their lives. But not the 70-year-old minister to Norway. She intends to keep in touch with the Norwegian government—her job in peacetime or wartime—just as long as it is humanly possible to do so.

Not only has she risked her life in her determination to fulfill her duty, but there is no sign that she has even in all these difficult days become confused or panicky.

Thoughtless of Own Comfort
Accounts of her doings have shown a woman ready to change plans at a moment's notice, calm in the face of every crisis. One thought, and one only, apparently guides her, to stick by her job, without regard for her safety and without a thought for her comfort.

Women everywhere ought to be proud of Mrs. Harriman. Proud of her not only as an American—but as a woman.

For her courage and cool head have spiked the old belief that a woman does very well in a job as long as everything goes smoothly—but that it takes a man to handle an emergency.
